AFTER COLLEGE I NOTICED

Things change.
We all
remember
expecting
to dance
with the moon
in this
very living condition.

I remember that circle of friends relaxed
constellation
around the fire around
the moon behind
my eyes still glowing growing
down an iridescent tube
waiting for me,
burning.

We tried, my friends
and I,
we still try
to love
others
in spite of wandering
wondering
if it all
just wasn't just isn't like Rolling Stone said in the name of Decadence & Androgyny--all this play in the woods
flying around
in the world
in our heads
our flouncy sleek stumbling pursuit of gratification.

And we
ALL ARE ARE ALL
you remember
you recall
seeking pleasure pleasure seeking drooling
stooling
clammering snoring
pacing staggering tramping in the fog we generate
by our very breathing.

In college
I recall learning
it was O.K. to mix.
Each to her own brother
his own sister
her own sister
his own brother.
