Gardner Chosen for New Endowed UB Law Professorship

Professor James A. Gardner is named to the UB Law School's new civil justice professorship, created through the generosity of alumnus Joseph W. Belluck and his wife, Laura L. Aswad. Aswad and Belluck, a 1994 Law School grad, committed funds for an endowed professorship to say thank you for the "quality education that I received and to encourage others to support the school."

Belluck added, "UB Law School is a very special place. It's an educational gem for New Yorkers and New York State through its commitment to strengthening communities."

Belluck, an experienced civil trial and appellate litigator, is a partner with Belluck & Fox in New York City. He is an adjunct lecturer of law at UB Law School, where he teaches a course on mass torts. He has lectured frequently on product liability, tort law, and tobacco control policy. He is considered an expert on consumer law and tort litigation.

Belluck graduated magna cum laude from the UB Law School in 1994. He served as articles editor of the Buf- falo Law Review and received the New York State Bar Association's Legal Ethics Award.

"This generous gift by Joe and Laura will allow an outstanding full-time faculty member to continue to teach public interest law courses and to produce meaningful scholarship with distinction," said Nils Olsen, dean of the UB Law School. "The professorship will allow the recipient to research, write, travel and publish. It's exciting for me to see young alumni giving back to UB so early in their careers. Joe Bel-luck is a shining example of philanthropy."

"I feel very honored to be recognized in this way by Dean Olsen," said Gardner. "I find it particularly inspiring to know that Joseph Belluck has done well by doing good, an example well worth heeding."

The professorship will assist Gardner in continuing his research into the legal institutions that structure the American political process. He is working on a book examining the regulation of election campaigns.

Belluck focuses his practice on asbestos, environmental and defective product cases. He has handled hundreds of cases involving injuries from asbestos, defective medical products, tobacco and lead paint.

"When I think back on my time at UB, I am thankful for the education and mentoring I received from so many professors, particularly Rob Steinfeld and Fred Konefsky. Lucinda Finley, Peter Pitegoff and others were also tremendous influences," said Belluck.

"I feel very honored to be recognized in this way. ... I find it particularly inspiring to know that Joseph Belluck has done well by doing good, an example well worth heeding."

Belluck previously served as counsel to the New York State Attorney General, representing the State of New York in its litigation against the tobacco industry. He was instrumental in settling New York State's tobacco lawsuit for $25 billion. He also served as director of attorney services for Trial Lawyers Care, an organization dedicated to providing free legal assistance to victims of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

He continued: "I am thrilled that Professor Gardner has been selected because he has the passion and intellect to enhance the learning experience at Buffalo and most importantly, to promote an active democracy and involved citizenry in New York through his work on electoral and constitutional issues."

Your stock may pay more dividends than you thought possible

You dabbled in the market long before it became a fad, and your hunches paid off. But now you need income, and your shares are only producing low annual dividends. So how can you make the most of your securities and still achieve your personal and financial goals?

Give your stock to the University at Buffalo Law School. With careful planning, your gift may provide you with income for life, a charitable deduction and reduce or eliminate taxes. And for the Law School it can mean more scholarships, research funds or the realization of your own personal vision and goal for the University.

To learn how your gifts of stock can benefit you and the Law School, please call Deborah Scott at (716) 645-2113 or Alan Carrel at (716) 645-6222 or e-mail them at law-development@buffalo.edu.
